TABLE OF CONTENTS

The Women's Studies programmes are designed to offer a variety of views about women in private and social roles. Courses in the programmes (Minor, Major and Certificate) include such concerns as Women in the Arts, Literature, History, and selected societal institutions such as the family. The aims of the programmes are to introduce the students to the study of women, to afford a background to those who will work with women in public occupations, and to stimulate further thought and research in the field.

SDEB C301/4 THE FELLOWS' SEMINAR
SPECIAL TOPIC:
SIMONE DE BEAUVOIR

(3 credit seminar)

TAUGHT BY: Mair Verthuy and Edmund Egan, Loyola
Mondays, 19:00 - 21:00

PREREQUISITE: Second year standing and permission of the Institute.

FORMAT: Seminar

CONTENT: The purpose of this seminar is to introduce the students to the writings of Simone de Beauvoir, to show the breadth of her activity, to assess her contribution to feminist theory and her place within it. The readings will include, therefore, not only some of her major works and critical comment thereon, but also theoretical writings by some later feminists. Students should acquaint themselves with such significant journals as Signs and Les Cahiers du Grif.

EVALUATION: Students will be expected to participate actively in the class discussions, to make oral presentations and to write one major essay, preceded by a book review related to the paper. In this way the students will receive some feedback before embarking on their major written assignment. Essays may be written in either French or English, but the classes will be conducted in English only.

REQUIRED READING: The texts may be read in either French or English

The Second Sex

Le Deuxième Sexe

All Said and Done

Tout Compte fait

A Woman Destroyed

La Femme rompue

Articles and interviews.

Articles et entrevues.

RECOMMENDED READING: Other titles will be distributed in class, but the students will be expected, with the help of the resource librarian, to do some bibliographic work on their own.

NOTE: As an adjunct to the seminar itself, but at different times, faculty members or students with some expertise in topics related to the seminar may conduct colloquia. These will offer all of us an opportunity to become acquainted with the contributions of various disciplines to the subject matter at hand.

Students who register in a Major, Minor or Certificate programme after June 1, 1982 must take the Fellows' Seminar (SDEB C300, C301, C302) at least once during their programme. These courses may also be substituted for electives in the Women's Studies programme with the permission of the advisors.

SDEB C302/2

FELLOWS' SEMINAR
SPECIAL TOPIC:
WOMEN IN ISLAM

(3 credits)

TAUGHT BY: Sheila McDonough
TTh, 13:15 - 14:30

PREREQUISITE: None

TYPE OF COURSE: Elective

CONTENT: The Qu'anic teachings relevant to women will be considered. The variety of attitudes expressed by Muslim scholars, theologians, philosophers, mystics and reformers in medieval and modern times will be analyzed. The purpose is to gain an appreciation of basic Muslim attitudes as well as an understanding of the diversity of ways in which Muslim culture has developed.

EVALUATION: One research paper and one take-home exam.

TBA, SGW (en français)
Tuesdays, 18:05 - 20:10
(Section BB)

TBA, Loyola
TTh, 11:45 - 13:00
(Section 01)

PREREQUISITE: None

TYPE OF COURSE: Normally a required course for student members of the Simone de Beauvoir Institute; compulsory for students minoring or majoring in Women's Studies.

CONTENT: Women's Studies, because of its emerging yet rapidly developing nature, both affects and transcends pre-existing disciplines. On the one hand, this course will show, in a historical context, how, by the use of new developments in various disciplines, fresh light can be shed on traditional assumptions. On the other, it will study not only the "mirror image" of women as found in certain male writings but also the images women have projected of themselves and the reasons underlying those projections.

TEACHING METHODOLOGY: The format will include lectures and group discussions.

EVALUATION: Assignments will include both written and oral presentations. Students are expected to take part in any class discussions.

SELECTED BIBLIOGRAPHY: These will include primary and secondary sources. Students may obtain the reading list in advance from the Simone de Beauvoir Institute 2170 Bishop St. for the SGW Campus, 7079 Terrebonne for the Loyola Campus.

WOMEN WORKING

(3 credits)

Elizabeth Gaskell, Harriet Martineau, Anna Jameson, Susannah Moodie, Thorstein Veblen, G.B. Shaw, Charlotte Gilman, Olive Schreiner, Virginia Woolf, Nellie McClung, Margaret Laurence, Hannah Arendt, Doris Lessing, Tillie Olsen, Dorothy Smith, Maxine Hong Kingston, Adrienne Rich.

CLAS C 254/3 WOMEN IN CLASSICAL ANTIQUITY
(3 credits)

(6 credits)

TAUGHT BY: Lionel Sanders, SGW
Tuesdays 20:25 - 23:30
(Section AA)

CONTENT: An examination of the social status and political influence of women in ancient Greece and Rome. Particular emphasis will be placed upon the apparent contradiction between the seemingly inferior position occupied by women in fifth-century Athens and the general enlightenment that characterized the epoch. Within this context, the influence of war upon the struggle for feminine emancipation, as seen through the eyes of tragedians, comic writers, philosophers, and historians, will be considered. Due attention will also be paid to the movement for feminine emancipation during the Late Roman Republic and Early Empire. The way in which women writers (such as Aphra Behn, Dickinson, Mansfield, Woolf, Plath, Livesey, Lessing, Sexton, Munro, Atwood, and Adrienne Rich) have expressed in these images dimensions of women's experiences which have been ignored, and new possibilities of self-definition.

As well as dealing with the topic of women in literature, the course aims, through class analysis and text-oriented written assignments to increase understanding and enjoyment of short stories, poems and plays as literary forms.

EDUC C321/2 SEX ROLE SOCIALIZATION IN THE SCHOOL

(3 credits)

(3 credits)

TAUGHT BY: TBA, SGW

T/Th - 13:15 - 14:30

PREREQUISITE: None

TYPE OF COURSE: Elective

CONTENT: This course will focus on how children are socialized for different work roles and how work segregation has occurred on the basis of sex. The role of elementary and secondary schools in relation to innovation and cultural change in social role will be examined.

ENGL C249/2 WOMEN IN LITERATURE I

(3 credits)

TAUGHT BY: Katherine Waters, Loyola
TTh, 19:00 - 22:00
(Section 40)

PREREQUISITE: None

TYPE OF COURSE: Elective

CONTENT: Through short stories, poems and plays, the image and the reality of women as young girls, lovers, mothers, wives, unmarried women, workers and artists will be studied. While a few texts will be from earlier centuries, emphasis will be on the evolution of these images from the late nineteenth century to the present, in relation to social, intellectual and literary developments.

Although there will be some works by men writers whose literary depiction of women has been influential (such as Ibsen and D.H. Lawrence), the focus will be upon the way in which women writers (such as Aphra Behn, Dickinson, Mansfield, Woolf, Plath, Livesay, Lessing, Sexton, Munro, Atwood, and Adrienne Rich) have expressed in these images dimensions of women's experiences which have been ignored, and new possibilities of self-definition.

As well as dealing with the topic of women in literature, the course aims, through class analysis and text-oriented written assignments to increase understanding and enjoyment of short stories, poems and plays as literary forms.

ENGL C250/4 WOMEN IN LITERATURE II

(3 credits)

TAUGHT BY: A. Bruné, SGW
Mondays 18:05 - 20:10
(Section AA)

TBA, Loyola
TTh, 13:15 - 14:30
(Section 01)

PREREQUISITE: ENGL C249 or a course which has stressed the novel as form.

TYPE OF COURSE: Elective

CONTENT: A selection of important works by women novelists and/or poets from among Jane Austen, Charlotte Bronte, George Eliot,
Elizabeth Barrett Browning, Emily
Dickinson, Virginia Woolf, Dorothy Livesay, Doris Lessing, Martha
Ostenso, Sylvia Plath, Margaret
Laurence, Adrienne Rich, Mavis
Gallant, Audrey Thomas, Margaret Atwood, Margaret Drabble. The question of whether and to what degree a female literary tradition exists (e.g. in use of artistic strategies, conventions, imagery, myth, form) will be considered as will the relationship between critical ideology and literary evaluation.

PSYC C390/3 SEXUAL DIFFERENTIATION

(6 credits)

TAUGHT BY: Elizabeth Henrik, Loyola
MW, 14:45 - 16:00

PREREQUISITE: Introductory Psychology or equivalent. Recommended: knowledge of basic biology.

TYPE OF COURSE: Elective. For students in Women's Studies and psychology or for students in other disciplines who are interested in widening their horizon in the understanding of females and males.

CONTENT: The course aims at exploring the many myths which surround the sexually dimorphic characteristics of women and men. It examines genetic, hormonal, and social influences shaping their behaviour from embryonic life, through infancy until adulthood. The topics include the analysis of gender identity, sex roles aggression, cognitive abilities, parenting, etc. The behaviour of non-human species is often examined in order to supplement the incomplete knowledge about humans. While the discussions include the behaviour of both sexes, the approach to the whole materials is from the point of view of women.

TEACHING METHODOLOGY: Lectures and discussion.

CANADA

(3 credits)

TAUGHT BY:

S. Alvi

Mondays, 18:05 - 20:10 SGW
(Sec. AA)

PREREQUISITE: ECON C201 and C303

CONTENT: This course presents a survey of the problems involved in measuring and explaining the distribution of economic resources among individuals and families. The course will deal with such questions as: why are some people wealthy and successful and others not? What, if anything, can or should be done about this state of affairs?

These are questions in which economists have long been interested. A considerable amount of work has been done in this area for Canada in the last decade. The course will thus focus heavily upon the Canadian economy.
